-The New York Times True crime told through true history, Breaking Blue is the cinematic account of the nation's longest running murder investigation – a killing from 1935 that wasn't solved until a half-century later.

Breaking Blue — Timothy Egan

One of Timothy Egan's earlier books, Breaking Blue allows us to follow Anthony Bamonte, a sheriff of Lake Pend Oreille (pond-er-AY), as he investigates the police cover-up of a Depression-era murder of a Newport (WA) sheriff who was shot dead by a Spokane detective. The "blue wall" had protected the killer, Clyde Ralstin for over 50 years.
